James McDevitt Joins Navicure as Chief Financial Officer

Industry veteran brings almost 30 years of extensive finance and operations experience to Internet-based medical claims clearinghouse

Atlanta, June 21, 2010—Navicure, a leading provider of automated, Web-based revenue cycle management (RCM) solutions for physician practices, today announced the appointment of James (Jim) McDevitt as chief financial officer (CFO). In this role, McDevitt will be responsible for all financial and accounting aspects of the company, including Navicure's long-term financial forecasting.

"With over 29 years of financial and business leadership experience with growing healthcare and technology companies, Jim brings an impressive background to the financial operations of Navicure," said Jim Denny, founder, president and CEO of Navicure. "His wealth of strategic financial management experience will prove invaluable during this important period of corporate growth. We welcome him to our team and look forward to working with him to ensure continued financial success."

McDevitt joins the Navicure executive team after holding senior financial positions at Geac Computer Corporation and Bausch & Lomb. He also served as chief financial officer for Clarus Corporation, a publicly traded Internet-based business-to-business electronic commerce solutions provider, and as chief operating officer at CDC Software, a $360 million provider of enterprise software applications and services. Most recently, McDevitt served as the president and CEO of Authoria, a SaaS-delivered comprehensive talent management software solution.

"Having the opportunity to work for such a forward thinking company with an established reputation for producing innovative technology and superior client service is very exciting," said McDevitt. "I look forward to playing an integral role in their continued success."
