Bradley Named Vice President, Strategic Planning for Navicure

New position demonstrates medical claims clearinghouse's continued commitment to helping physician practices address evolving business and statutory changes

Atlanta, May 8, 2009 — Navicure, a leading Internet-based medical claims clearinghouse for physician practices, today announced the appointment of Ken Bradley, a co-founder and member of Navicure's leadership team, to spearhead strategic planning. In this role, Bradley and his team will be responsible for assessing external markets, monitoring government regulatory requirements and providing competitive analyses. He will report directly to President Jim Denny.

"With the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, ICD-10 and other pending regulatory requirements, it is critical for physician practices to be aware of how these changes can affect reimbursement and broader accounts receivables in both the short and long term," said Bradley. "We see it as our responsibility to our clients to eliminate some of this burden by ensuring Navicure's solutions meet evolving requirements and that we're also identifying new areas that might impact practices in the future."

Bradley was a founding Navicure team member and has since served as vice president, transaction and interface development, where he was responsible for the development and management of transactions and associated interfaces between Navicure, healthcare providers and payer organizations. Bradley brought more than 18 years of experience in the healthcare industry to Navicure, specializing in the development of practice management software (PMS), and the design and development of systems and applications utilized to process medical claims.

"Ken has the depth and breadth of experience needed to tackle these critical issues that will shape our industry and business for years to come," said Denny. "We are confident he will develop strategies and solutions to address the growing complexity of our industry, which will ultimately help our clients continue to be successful during these changing times."
